

America doesn't do slow.¹

We built the interstates. We broke the sound barrier. We took people from right here in Ohio and put them on the moon. We're a “move fast and create amazing things” kind of country.

Except with our internet. We're ranked 11th in the world for speed and 131st for price.² If we're going to be the leader in moving fast and making things, then America needs the broadband it deserves. And we need it for everyone.
Everywhere.

And that's what we do...

Hi, Columbus. We're Starry.

And we're getting you the blazing-fast broadband you deserve, at a price you can afford, and we're bringing it to you this summer.

We're a different kind of internet service company. One that's built to serve you. That means great internet service at a fair price. Transparent, no-tricks billing. No long-term contracts. No cancellation fees. No bundles. No credit checks. Unlimited broadband, no data caps. And, 24/7 real, live customer support that will remind you that help should be human, not a series of hold music tracks.

We do things differently because for far too long families have been trapped, paying too much money for too little service from the usual internet service providers. We're here to change things.

So, to the estimated 100,000 Columbus-area families³ that go without broadband access at home because it's too expensive and to the estimated 10,000 Columbus Public School kids that couldn't get online last year for virtual learning,⁴ and to all the families who are just tired of expensive, always-increasing internet bills...

It's nice to meet you.
